

How to Navigate in PBworks

There are two basic ways to move from page to page in a wiki workspace. You may go from one page to another using either “Navigator” or “SideBar.” Both are located on the right hand side of the screen.

Using Navigator

Navigator (circled in orange on the right) displays the wiki folder contents as separate screens. At Navigator’s top level, you will see each of the folders that are a part of the wiki. Clicking on a folder name will allow you to see the pages that are contained in that folder. You can then view a page by clicking on the name of the page (boxed in orange).

You can easily return to view the list of wiki folders by clicking the “Back” button (circled in blue).

Using SideBar

Starring Pages

You can easily find the pages you most often visit by starring those pages. Once a page is starred, it will appear below the "Starred Pages" heading in the Navigator. Click on the star icon that is just to the left of the wiki page name.
